

Vocational Study Retreats

Purpose

Under the auspices of the Transformations Project, a series of Vocational Study Retreats seeks to develop a deeper understanding of the “theological exploration of vocation.” The intensive study retreats assist participants in pursuing their own vocation, fulfilling the College’s call to outstanding Christian liberal arts education and leading students into greater discernment of their own callings.

Range of Topics

- Philosophy of education
- Liberal arts orientation
- Historically orthodox Christian faith
- Wesleyan heritage
- Vocation in relation to one’s discipline
- Faith and character development
- Methodologies for vocational exploration
- The growing literature on vocation
- The penetration of culture and society
- Creational, redemptional, incarnational, sacramental theological themes
- Integration, excellence, and vision

“Faith must seek understanding” ~ St. Anselm of Canterbury

Description

- Annually, in May following Commencement, starting in 2004 and continuing through 2007
- One-fourth of college faculty and professional staff invited to participate each year
- Three days and two overnights
- Accommodations, meals and books provided
- Nationally-known speakers
- $1,000 stipend

Contact Information

For application forms and detailed information about the Vocational Study Retreats, go to www.asbury.edu/transformations or contact Steve Dawson, Program Coordinator, Transformations Project, ext. 2391.

*“The university is a clear-cut fulcrum with which to move the world.
Change the university and you change the world.”
~ Dr. Charles Malik*