

A Message from the Dean

DR. MIKE KANE

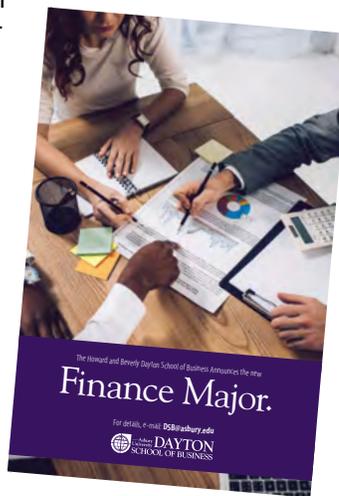

Dean, Howard and Beverly Dayton School of Business
mike.kane@asbury.edu

As we completed another year, we celebrate the accomplishments of our students in the Howard and Beverly Dayton School of Business. What a great year we have had. We continue to regularly compete in business case competitions and business entrepreneurship competitions. We are excited to announce the new Finance Major. This major will fill a need across the country as the demands for accounting and finance continue to grow. What better way to impact our world than coming alongside the financial and business industry with people of faith and integrity. Alumni mentoring opportunities and internships enable our students to develop critical learning skills, as well on-the-job experience. As we place our students in internships and with mentors, we invite you to partner with us in shaping the lives of future leaders. Will you come alongside us and offer your experience and your expertise to our students and young alumni? Most business schools desire to be the best IN the world. Our goal is for our graduates to be the best FOR the world. Thank you for being salt and light in your corner of the world. We are grateful for you and for your impact. We also want to celebrate the announcement that our very own Associate Dean of Business, Dr. Kevin J. Brown, is the new president of Asbury University. Congratulations, Kevin!

New Finance Major Launches

Asbury is uniquely positioned to launch proficient business leaders and people of character into the world of finance. This new major is focused on corporate finance and investment banking. Rich Wright '89 brings professional experience in global finance and enhances our accomplished Finance and Accounting faculty team in the Dayton School of Business.

ALUMNI SPOTLIGHT:

Andrew Coleman '98

Coleman, a business management graduate and member of the Asbury University Board of Trustees, serves as the commercial leader for GE Aviation's digital business. In this role, he leads a team focused on the global commercial aviation industry as well as the military, federal, maintenance repair and overhaul and aviation lessor industry segments. GE Aviation's digital business supports global aviation with a broad range of industrial internet applications ranging from fuel efficiency, operations recovery, flight analytics, intelligent fleet, edge analytics, avionics, predictive maintenance, brilliant MRO and asset performance management. As the commercial leader, Andrew is responsible globally for sales, marketing, consulting, alliances, customer success, solution architecture, business development and customer support. He starts every day by asking Christ to walk with him every step of the way. While many are called to more "traditional" mission fields, he knows that God stirred in his being a passion for business and it is through that means that he is able to advance His kingdom in ways he never would have guessed, imagined, or done on his own.

DEPARTMENT HIGHLIGHTS

Representing in Toledo

The Dayton School of Business sales team represented the University well at the University of Toledo Invitational Sales competition 2019. Competitors Jack Widener '21 and Luke Phillips '20 diligently prepared and were excellent representatives of Asbury University. Special thanks to faculty coach Dr. George Allen and peer coach Kaylee Van Winkle '19 for providing strategy advice and encouragement to the competitors.

Congratulations to the AU Sales Team!

Asbury University's sales team had a great overall showing at the International Collegiate Sales Competition in Orlando, Fla., placing sixth out of 80 participating teams. Special congratulations to Kaylee Van Winkle '19, who finished third.

Walsh is an assistant professor of Accounting at Asbury. After her undergraduate degree, she received her MBA from Norwich University in 2006. Currently, she is working on a doctoral dissertation for Anderson University focusing on the use and effectiveness of internal regulations in churches. She is researching specifically how trust plays into good stewardship of resources, to "determine if there is a broader definition of controls and variables by which we should evaluate an organization." When asked why she loves teaching at Asbury, she said, "I am privileged to be a part of my students' journeys of becoming who God has called them to be." She is excited about the way God is providing for and blessing the Dayton School of Business. As a class advisor for the Visionary Class of 2020, she and her family are actively involved with many students across campus. When asked what her Business students need most, she said that "nothing can replace the value of having someone that is currently in the field share with our students, whether that is through mentoring, speaking in classes, helping them get internships or just being available to have a conversation."

STUDENT SPOTLIGHT: Kaylee Van Winkle '19

Van Winkle graduated with a degree in Accounting. When asked about her Asbury experience, she said that her time here has taught her about what community truly means. "I am extremely grateful for being part of various groups and activities that have pushed me to think bigger, love deeper and listen closer," Van Winkle said. "I have discovered a group of professors and students who not only inspire me to grow closer to Christ, but they also encourage me daily to live life with a heart that is bent outward, towards serving and loving others with more of Christ and less of myself." This summer, Van Winkle was chosen as one of four equestrians to represent the United States Pony Club in Hong Kong in an international show jumping and dressage competition. Her future plans include entering an outside sales or marketing role in Kentucky or Ohio. Kaylee asks for prayer that she will continue to trust in the Lord's faithfulness through her journey. For her time in Hong Kong, she specifically asks "for their hearts to be open and soft, and my heart to be responsive and gracious" to God's Word and love.
