The Faith and Learning Paper is an opportunity for a faculty member to spend time giving intentional attention to the issue of integrating faith into one's academic discipline. The paper is not a Christian testimony or devotional, but a scholarly document in which the faculty member identifies ways of engaging his or her academic area and Christian truth and mission. The paper should demonstrate the faculty member's ability to think integratively through the lens of the faculty member's academic discipline and his or her informed biblical understanding within the broader Wesleyan theological context.

The reviewers will serve as mentors throughout the process, advising the faculty member on the topic, suggesting resources and viewpoints, reading drafts as they are made available, and offering critiques of the work.

Reviewers will be asked, as part of the reviewing and approval process, that the Faith and Learning Paper contain the following features:

- Clear connectivity between the faculty member's discipline and his / her Christian faith
- High quality (depth of thought, clearness of communication, attention to detail)
- Completeness (breadth of coverage, balanced in perspective)
- Demonstrated familiarity with relevant literature (both Christian and the academic field)
- Informed biblical understanding within the broader Wesleyan theological context.

If you agree to serve as a reviewer in the preparation of this faculty member's Faith and Learning Paper, please sign below and return this form to Asbury University Office of the Provost at the address below.
